It's back to school time and that may mean a couple of different things to you. First, it might mean that it's time to prepare the kiddos for back to school. Second, it might mean a little "me time". Here are a few tips on how to get your children ready for school and also tips on allowing a little time for yourself.

Depending on your child's age, you may have a different to-do list. But regardless of age, there are a few different items applicable to all. First, meet the teacher and open house. These are two events that are must do's. Not only do they show the teachers that you're an involved parent, but your child sees your commitment to their education as well.

Shopping has never been easier for back to school. Wal-Mart, Target, Office Max and Staples all have great specials this time of year. In fact, a smart shopper can find a large amount of freebies if they are willing to do their homework. Also, Tax Free Week/Day is honored in some states. It's a time when states forgo sales tax on clothing purchases and other related items. Make sure you do back to school clothes shopping during this time. For parents, it's time for you to focus a little on yourself. How about a gym membership or martial arts classes? Martial arts can not only be fun and rewarding, but it's a great way to get in shape. After a long summer, it's important that you take some time for yourself.
